It would have been a seare to a number of Republicans to essen the letter in full, but from the and given enough may be inferred know that it was the produc-of some one committed to the interof Col. Lamon regardless of the exact stuation of the case. The main point and reasoning of the letter is that at all events, and in any case, Lamon should receive, the nomination of the Republican convention, and this above all others, lecause he would catch so large a number of Democratic votes. This would seem to indicate on the Col.'s part a leaning toward the Democracy. It is well enough to have it understood that the Republicans of the Second District want no man of doubtful politics as their standard bearer in the coming Concressional fight; no man who has been at any time, anything but a pure, firm adhorest Republican standing by the party in adversity as well as prosperity, and if any other than this is put forward an ingnominious defeat will most assuredit follow:

The statement of Col. Lamon's very real popularity in the counties of erkeley, Jefferson and Morgan, is of true. Ontside of a few it hardly probable that he would arry more than the Republican of in the counties named, if indeed that.

Of all the groups on that long, wide roof, none seemed in trouble save the gentle mother and her little babe. All slept as sweetly underneath the coverlid of blue and gold, as though they were housed in a palace on a bed. I expected to find what I failed to find.

housed in a palace on a bed. 1 expected to find what I failed to find.

On the way down I was not so fortunate. At every floor three was a fire escape, badly arranged in that it does not extend across the entire floor of the double-decker. In case of fire, the people living on one side of the great wide house would be compelled to force their way through the apartments of their neighbors, if they wished to use the fire escape. On every one lay one or two people, generally asleep, but in some cases awake. All the doors of all the rooms were wide open, but the sickening stench was positively terrible. As I passed the front room of the second floor, groams attracted my attention. Entering, I saw the faint light of a very smelly kerosene lamp, a group of tobacco

On Crosby street, from 31 to 39, there

if I don't take ye in."

On Crosby street, from 31 to 39, there are large seven-story tenement houses, packed with a mixture of a kind of cosmopolitan human hash curious to see. As many of these creatures as can get on the roofs do so. As a rule, they don't sleep much. Some of them play cards, many smoke, some lower pitchers, and mugs to the basement by strings, and draw them up filled with beer. One old sailor had a fancy that it, would be a good idea to awing his hammock between two chimnies. He did so. Of course he was very soon "cut down," after which much profane ejaculation.

Over the door of 12 Crosby street is a quaint little sign—Agailo Harpist. It would be difficult to ascertain how many people live and die there. They all mount to the roof, at all events, and make night hideous with all manner of matruments. In Mott street, there are five immense houses, accommodating one hundred and fifty families, every member of which earns his living making cigara. Dirty, half-clad, and wretched to a degree, these poor people seek to restore their enfeched circulation by a breath of fresh BASHPULNESS is an inherent quality of womanhood. A dozen of women may be sathered together, every soul of them taking at the rate of forty miles an hour, when the announced entrance of a solidary, weak-looking man will throw a ple of silence over the assembly, with an alruphness which baffles the most searching investigation of a clue to what they were talking about.

These are 9,000 tenement-houses in years are already for the "cota victor that great city. Over on the east side the Germans initiated a system of double-deckers, as their large houses are called, edeckers, as their large houses are called, edeckers, which baffles the most searching the country of which accommodate 50 and 60 and alruphness which baffles the most searching in restingation of a clue to what they were talking about.

from his roost on the roof to the stifle of his chamber. The police report very little trouble among the people on the roof-top. Now and then, too much beer ferments a quarrel, but the tendency is peaceful, even when sleep declines to be woosd and won. The Italian diet is peculiarly offensive, and their rooms are exceptionally filthy. But even they, enured, as they are to stench and dirt, are driven by heat, and the impossibility of waiting, to the tops of their tenements. They all smoke. The Germans and Irish pay some attention to the decencies, and even the proprieties, of life, at night, the Italians do not. As a museum of curiosities, the Italian-filled roof of a Cherry street tenement house is ne plus Cherry street tenement house is no plus ultra. Some of these vast caravansaries are regular bee-hives. The ragmuffins of the street swarm through them. After 12 at night they may found "at home" raising Cain, en deshabille, and at times raising the drowsy echoes of night by the Bacchanalianisms of their fun and frolic. The officers say that sometimes the street is as quiet as the grave. At other times the noise is deafening.

On Park street, from 31, to 39, immense houses are packed with these people, of whom nine-tenths sleep on the roofs. In the most comfortable tenement houses, ventilation is impossible. In better times when single families occupied an entire floor, it was very nice. Now, in every room is a full-fledged family—old, young, sick and well; two beds, the stove, washtub, and cradle. Of course, Shadrack, Meshack and Abednego had a pretty hot, close time of it in their little furnace; but what would they have done if there had been half a dozen children, a sick woman and a weeks' washing hanging on the ropes besides? Pen would fail to picture the destitution discovered in a few hours' tramp. The lack of good clothing is almentable. The consequent demoralization is ferrible. The lack of bread is almost universal. The consequent dissationat universal. The consequent dissatisaction is worth watching. Feeble women do not enjoy sleeping on the roofs, on account of the occasional variation in men do not enjoy sleeping on the roofs on account of the occasional variation in on account of the occasional variation in the temperature during the night, and es-pecially about 3 in the morning. But to men and little children the change from the intolerable heat and closeness of the room helow is delightful. At least 50, 000 people slept on the roofs, last night, and of that 50,000 at least 20,000 had no idea where their breakfast was to come from.

Bellaib Locale.—Col. Sullivan, in his card in yesterday morning a INTELLIGENCER, amply evidences the fact that he posseness a "good forget-story." He says that he is not aware that we have ever called at his office for information concerning the B. & S. W. R. R., when the facts of the case are that at an early period in the history of the road we called upon the Colonel himself at his office not less than three times for the purpose of obtaining material for a lengthy article upon the resources of the country through which it was proposed that the road should pass. He each time excused himself from an interview at the time, and made an appointment for another time, when he again postponed it. Finally, after some half-dozen vain attempts to procure information, we concluded that it was useless, and since then have relied upon other sources—sources more interested in having the news concerning the project published. As to the letting of the advertisement exclusively to Democratic papers, that was of course only accidental. We all know that a majority of the Board and the President and Secretary are Republicans.
